

Radioline launches a new version including Spotify and Deezer

Paris, FRANCE – February 19th, 2015 – Radioline, a leading radio aggregator in Europe, has just released a new version of its mobile app.

Streaming is disrupting the way people listen to music. Nearly 15 billion songs are streamed online (double of 2013) and digital now accounts for 51 per cent of UK music consumption*. After the success of the podcasts, on-demand music is complementing the still massive use of radio, which remains the most of influential tool for music discovery.

As a worldwide premiere in aggregation field, Radioline opens bridges between radio, podcast and ondemand streaming: users are now able to export their favourites tracks to their playlists on Deezer or Spotify. Other innovations will soon complete the service. Radioline also offers a premium version of the app (0,79 £ per month) featuring offline access to podcasts & no ads.

The new service is available on mobile (iOS et Android) in France and in the United Kingdom, and will be launched on the web and in the rest of the world in April 2015.
